

New England

New England Flag

New England is highly industrial, but it also has many fields, woods, and small towns. New England is the part of the United States that is most like "old" England. It is also the most well-defined region of the United States: Americans might disagree over exactly which states are part of the South, but for everyone New England includes six states — Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut.

The physical geography of New England is diverse for such a small area. Southeastern New England is covered by a narrow coastal plain, while the western and northern regions are dominated by the rolling hills and worn-down peaks of the northern end of the Appalachian Mountains. The Green Mountains are part of the Appalachian Mountains. Vermont, "The Green Mountain State", is named after them. The part of the same range that is in Massachusetts and Connecticut is known as The Berkshires or the Berkshire Hills.

The Appalachian Mountains

The Atlantic fall line lies close to the coast, which enabled numerous cities to take advantage of water power along the numerous rivers, such as the Connecticut River, which bisects the region from north to south.

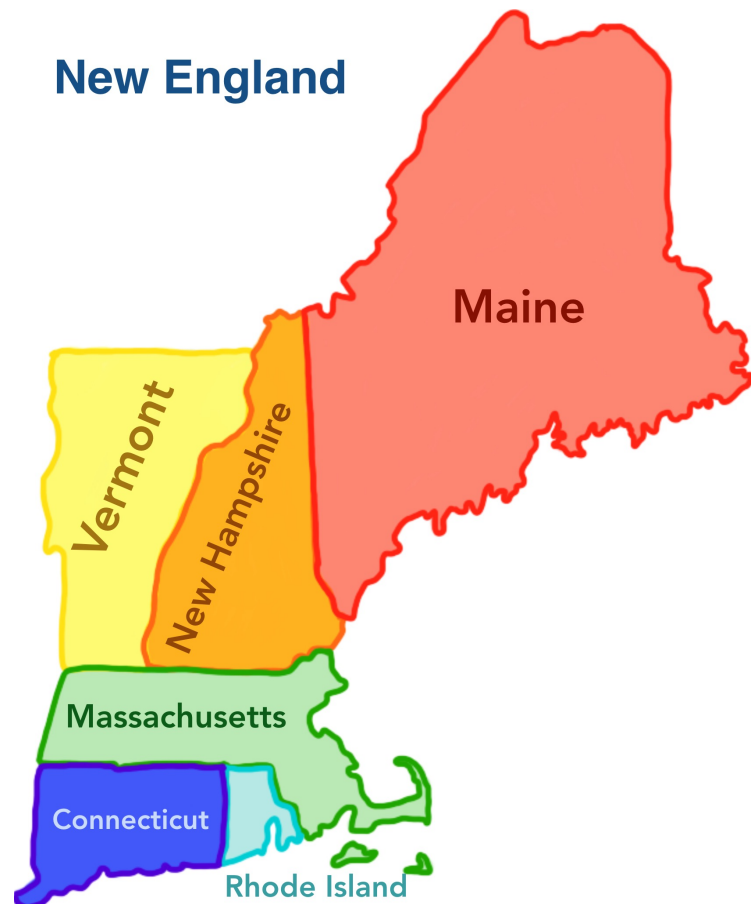

Capital cities

- Maine — Augusta
- New Hampshire — Concord
- Vermont — Montpelier
- Massachusetts — Boston
- Rhode Island — Providence
- Connecticut — Hartford

Abbreviations

- Maine — ME
- New Hampshire — NH
- Vermont — VT
- Massachusetts — MA
- Rhode Island — RI
- Connecticut — CT

Source of the text: Wikipedia